Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from On Peripheral Neuritis: A Treatise, With Illustrations The early death of my friend and colleague, Dr. James Roes, has deprived the profession of a great part of the results of his far-reaching investigations on diseases of the nervous system, but the demand for his published works, and the acknowledged value of all his writings, indicate clearly the importance of preserving such further material as is still to be obtained. Actuated by the desire to preserve in permanent form Dr. Ross's work upon peripheral neuritis, and urged by some of his friends to undertake the task, I have collected in this volume a series of observations which were to have formed part of a complete monograph. Unfortunately his work was cut short by death, and, as no papers were left which in any way carried it beyond the point at which the original essays cease, it became necessary for me to write the whole of the latter part of this book. As the volume now stands the first 263 pages are verbally Dr. Ross's own, but for the subsequent part, beginning with Paralysis after Typhoid Fever, I am solely responsible. One exception, however, is to be mentioned. My friend Dr. Rt. Williamson has done such good work in the pathology of diabetes that I asked him to write the section relating to neuritis in that disease (pp. 361 to 375), and my best thanks are due to him for the care and thought he has bestowed on the subject. I am also indebted to Dr. Goodfellow, Resident Medical Officer to the Manchester Royal Infirmary, for much help in correcting the proof sheets; and to...
